

The 2013 SWBL Cardinals will remember a lot about the Second Annual NWLA Tournament. The eight players we brought to represent the SWBL will bring back memories and experience that will continue to make them better wiffleball players and enthusiasts. Here is what we think everyone else in the tournament field may remember us for during the second annual (besides our incredible jerseys), even if it is just the eight of us who do the remembering...

Remembering the 2013 SWBL Cardinals

Sam Skibbe – His Walk Up Song, “The Price is Right” was the most well known throughout the tournament, Vlade’s scream-o was a close second.

Brett Spencer – Started the first annual All Star Game for the Gold Team and struck out the side, setting the tone for the successful weekend ahead, for the SWBL.

Blake Spencer – Was not brought to Ohio as a pitcher but after being put on the bump, Blake no hit TBW and OCWA in two innings against each opponent.

Gus Skibbe – The first player to get a hit off Chris Harley in the 2013 Tournament, deep into the DE Tournament and will be known as the reason the tournament rules committee adds an infield fly rule.

Chris Meador – TBW could not stop talking about the defense being displayed by the reigning Midwest Fielder of the Year, turning two double plays in his first game in Left Field.

Patrick Gatti – Will be remembered for his uncanny ability to match with women on the “Tinder” application.

Edloe Donnan – Always a few connections behind PG in “Tinder” and will be remembered for his early morning Wake Up Call Setup.

Peter Leicht – Twitter and beer aficionado, and 2013’s SWBL Communication Director.

Let’s just hope the critics (Alex, Carl, Brandon) remember these things and more (even though most are irrelevant) during the 2014 pre-tournament podcast. Only 355 days left until the 3rd Annual NWLA Tournament.
